DENOUNCED HIS PARTY.

Democratic orator in the Baltimore mayoralty campaign.

John Green, formerly an Albert Democrat, Calls Attention to Facts and Asks the Republicans to Examine the Statements, to Study, and Then Vote. "Vote A. Strake Democrat for Governor, Republican, Independent—A. S. Kelly's Ashore."

[illegible]

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 31.—(Special.)—Mr. John Green, the party orator for the Republicans of this, the home of the Democratic National Convention, and a prominent man active in organizing, in the Republican State Committee, that is to make the opposition vote congenially as can be had out after the nominations had been made, was accompanied to William L. Marbury of the Baltimore bar, also identified with the active movements. Mr. Green was introduced by Congressman McKenzie, who introduced him as an orator, now Democrat who had the courage of stating the part of the people before party. When the audience had assembled Mr. Green made a speech in which he bore statements. Between times, while he changed, together with Congressman Higgins and Francis Scott, with engineering the listing of the ballot-boxes. Said he: "I've said and repeat that I shall be found absolutely free to vote for whatever party I please. I shall simply say that I shall vote for Republican candidates. I shall simply say that I shall vote for Republican candidates. I shall simply say that I shall vote for Republican candidates

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

FOR SEPTEMBER.

A SUPERB AUTUMN NUMBER. The magazine opens with Mr. Edward L. Wilson's finely illustrated article on The Modern Mile; the Rev. W. S. Rainsford, D. D., Rector of St. George's Church, New York, contributes an entertaining account of Camping and Hunting in the Rhinehorn, and the successful pursuit of large game, beautifully illustrated; there is the first part of a unique and charming Japanese story, entitled The Sacred Plums of Taira Ji, written by Mr. E. H. House (for many years a resident in Japan), and illustrated by Mr. George Foster Barnes; the Thackeray letters are continued, with some reminiscences by Miss Kate Perry, both illustrated. A timely and most important contribution is An Unpublished Draft of a National Constitution by Edmund Randolph, (with footnote) by Moncure D. Conway, which will attract great attention among all students of the American Constitution; two highly interesting and valuable papers are The Development of the American University, by Prof. George T. Ladd, of Yale College, and English in Newspapers and Novels, by Prof. Adams Sherman Hill; there are poems by Mrs. James T. Fields, Julia C. R. Dorr, Lucius Isaacson Guiney, and James Boyle O'Reilly; an exciting railroad story, entitled Flambeau's Magni, by A. C. Gordon; an out-door paper by Maurice Thompson, etc.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

HER WORK OF THE SHARP OLD WAY OF ENGLAND.

London Letter in New York Sun: While the effect of the Parliamentary election upon the policies of parties and upon the personnel of governments, the statesmen's duties and public questions to be submitted to be a subject not for the Gladstone family spat, it is probably safe to say that Mrs. Gladstone, the grand dame is naturally under that of Lady Aberdeen or Lady Dufferin, or Lady Randolph. She has another personal claim upon our gratitude, and Gladstone, as well as a London Bootblack-none. But the people love her because in advancing years prefer to keeping the course of public affairs, and this shows her to possess a considerable character and her high standard of womanly.

Mr. Gladstone's manner had to do something with personal devotion between the husband and wife and that was the secret of the domestic happiness. While, of late years, Mrs. Gladstone married Lieutenant Gladstone, of the Hawarden Volunteers, Mr. Gladstone, his wife, was a Miss Glynne, of Hawarden, Flintshire, and was descended from an old Welsh family. Her father was a Member of Parliament, and her mother was a Miss Neville, of Audley End, Essex. Mrs. Gladstone's family connections were very extensive, and she was a cousin of Lord Lyttelton, Lord Stanley of Alderley, Lord Wrottesley, Lord Hatherton, Lord Grey de Wilton, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Lyttel
